SLEUTHS FIND THE LOST GAME

Officers of 7th Infantry Find Atkinson Park and Beat Fort Shafter.

This is the story of how seven military Sherlock Holmes traveled all over town and found a baseball game. When they found that game they were so pleased at the result of their sleuth-like efforts that they borrowed three men—one of the officers said he was a detective, and not a baseball player—and put it all over the officer men from the Twentieth unmercifully to the tune of 13 to 2.

The game was originally scheduled to be played at Aala Park. Yesterday morning it was changed to Atkinson Park and word was sent to the transport Sheridan, but nobody seems to have got the message.

Shortly before 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon there was quite a crowd assembled to witness the game between the officers of the Twentieth and Seventh Infantry, but there were no players there. Finally, in twos and threes, the Seventh representatives came on the field. They said that they wanted a ball game, they would have a ball game, and they intended to find that ball game.

Lieutenant McEntle was Sherlock-in-chief and he soon had scouts running up the different telephones. "Ha ha, a clue," he cried when one returned and said it was to be at Punahou. "We shall advance on Punahou," and they did.

Accompanied by a score of fans who were bound to see the game, they boarded a King street car and transferred to Punahou. But Alexander field was bare, and the lower field was taken up with a practise game of the college team.

But the chief sleuth found another clue. Somebody said Atkinson Park, and then came the question of how to get there.

First they tried Aala Park. No baseball game was there; so they took a ride to Punahou. But that diamond, too, was bare.

Atkinson Park the place, they heard. Sans auto, hack or bike, there was only one thing for them to do—

They had to get out and hike.

"Tramp, tramp, shirts are getting damp. Oh, shall we ever get there ere it's dark? But march we must, through mud and dust,

From Punahou to Atkinson Park."

And they did hike. In spite of the poor meter of the last line of the chorus, they set both feet foremost, and, led by the Sherlock-in-chief, started down the road to King street, where they hoped to catch another clue from the conductor of the car.

Clue in a Hack.

Presently a hack was discovered. The driver was held up and searched for clues as to the location of Atkinson Park. He announced his innocence of all complicity in the crime, but agreed to carry as many as could pile in. But two scouts were told off to take the hack while the other sleuths waited for the car.

The scouts found Atkinson Park first and discovered the other baseball team vigorously practising and wondering where the Seventh players were. When the rest of the contingent arrived and the leader explained the methods he had used to find the ground, intense admiration of a true Watsonian kind was expressed, and then began the matter of selecting teams.

The Game Is Started.

The Seventh had six players and one who agreed to play under compulsion, but, luckily, there were some Marines practising, and three of them were pressed into the service of the mere Infantry.

The lineups were all made up and a vote taken as to whether the game should last five or only three innings. The majority favored five innings and it was so ordered. Then the mighty ball-tossers of the Seventh, fresh from their trip on the ocean, began to loosen up for the game. When Davis, the pitcher for the visitors, began to wind for a practise pitch, there were cries of awe on all sides. "Is it possible," they said, "that a man can so wind himself into knots and yet unfurl again?" Yea, it was possible, and with terrible vehemence did he spurt the ball over the plate.

An Errorless (?) Game.

The recorder of events was surrounded by eight husky officers. They said, "You shall keep score, and, beware, this must be an errorless game." It was. The official score shows it.

Then the Seventh master batters went in to bat. They scored five runs in that first inning. There were three hits, but no errors. No, merely a few misjudgments of distances. But what fun it was to watch those good officer men romp round the bases. They were having more fun than a bunch of kids let out of school.

Then the Fort Shafter aggregation had a try. But what a fat chance they had with the gang of impeccable ball-pounders from the transport! "Chance?" Not a look-in, not even a clue. The game was full of fun from beginning to end. Perhaps the funniest part of all was in the last inning, when Sherlock Holmes McEntle swatted a real, live, truly rural home run.

It was a wanger, a banger, a whim-doodle, and the ball went nearly into the ocean. But the detective man was too careless. He thought his disguise was perfect and nobody would see him cut second base. This spoilt two runs, for he was running so hard that he had caught up the man who was on second when he started, and it was decided that both were out, as the other runner was not home when the culprit cut second.

The official—please note the "official"—score was as follows:

OFFICIAL DRAW FOR GOLF TODAY

These are the official drawings for the Country Club tournament this afternoon. All those who wish to get in the game, but have not yet entered, may still do so by entering today, in which case their names will be added to the list and they will play on either side according to the order in which their names are entered.

The drawings are as follows:
Charles Hartwell vs. T. Gill, H. B. Giffard vs. Frank Armstrong, George Angus vs. Dr. C. B. High, E. O. White vs. J. C. Evans, H. H. Walker vs. H. A. Wilder, A. Ewart vs. F. W. Klebahn, S. G. Wilder vs. J. O. Young, E. J. Waterman vs. F. C. Smith, E. Munroe vs. S. Beardmore, Charles Weight vs. W. Simpson, H. Cobb vs. C. Kimball, H. C. Carter vs. Mark Robinson, W. W. Thayer vs. George R. Carter, Mr. Babson vs. W. C. Wilder, George Isenberg vs. F. L. Waldron, H. A. Walker vs. I. Spalding.

Those who are not on this list, please get their entries in as early this morning as possible. Other entries will be put on one side or the other in rotation as their names come in.

Twosomes may start playing at any time they like during the afternoon as long as they begin early enough to finish before the call for supper comes along. It is up to each player to pair off and start at the time most convenient to his opponent and himself.

The bus will start running at noon and will keep running all the afternoon and evening until the last car. The chowder will be of the usual sumptuous variety, and the smoking concert in the evening is warranted to bring out the best of the club's talent, and that is of no mean order. The event today will be one of the best of its kind the club has ever pulled off.

SCHOOL GAMES ON KAM. FIELD

The interscholastic games will be at Kamehameha this afternoon. The first game will start at 1:30 and will be between High School and Punahou, the second game will be Kamehameha and St. Louis.

Of course, the main excitement of the day will be provided by the first game. These two teams have met twice and each has won a hard fought game, the second one going to ten innings. Punahou, from tagging along at the tail end has worked up to first place and it is up to High School to win today if they are going to have a grab at the pennant.

There is still an unplayed game from last Wednesday between the Saints and the High School which was stopped by the rain. If High had won they would have been tied with Punahou, as it is they are second with the Saints third and the Kams fourth.

A victory by the High School will tie them for first place, and a victory for the Kams will change their place with the Saints. The situation is still exciting enough to please the most pessimistical fan and it is expected that there will be a large crowd out to watch the games. Let us all hope that the weather will be fine. Doc. Monarrat is requested to fix this matter and give it proper attention this time.

The postponed Saint-High game will probably be played on Monday at Alexander field as the Kams are scheduled to play Punahou that day.

SOME CHANGES IN GOLF RULES

NEW YORK, May 1.—All clubs holding membership in the United States Golf Association are being supplied with books of the new rules containing the American interpretations. In some instances clubs have sent for a sufficient number of extra copies to supply all their members, as it is quite the thing these days for devotees of the game, to make a study of the rules. Already several well-known players, through thoughtlessness, have got into difficulties.

Even on the other side, shortly after the new St. Andrew's rules went into effect, James Braid early in a match proceeded to brush the line of his putt, whereupon his opponent, promptly claimed the hole. That probably will serve to keep this change fresh in the open champion's memory.

This rule, however, is not so drastic as some seem to think. While brushing the line of putt is prohibited, the rule also states that worms, snow and ice may be scraped aside with the club, but the club must not be laid with more than its own weight on the ground nor may anything be pressed down, either with the club or in any other way. At match play a violation of this rule incurs a loss of the hole, while at medal play the penalty is two strokes.

There is now no loophole for those who have ever sought to bar stimpies. For instance, rule 7 states that "when the balls are in play the ball farthest from the hole shall be played first." The special rule 1 reads: "On the putting green, if the competitor whose ball is the nearer to the hole should play first, his ball shall be at once replaced."

The penalty for a breach of this rule is the disqualification of both competitors. As a further check, special rule 2 provides that a competitor shall not waive any penalty incurred by his opponent under penalty of disqualification.

Other points to be remembered this season are that a player is allowed a clear putt to the hole on a green where there is casual water; that a shot out of bounds from the tee may be re-teed, but that the green only dropped; that a practise swing is permissible more than a club's length from the ball and that players looking for a lost ball must signal to others to pass and must not wait until they go by and are out of range.

FULL PROGRAM FOR JUNE 11

There was a big bunch of motorcycle enthusiasts at the Y. M. C. A. meeting last night, and now the full program for June 11 has been made up. The motorists were more than willing to work in harmony with the Y. M. C. A., and it is due to their courtesy that this program was made possible.

Here is the official list of events and the times at which they will take place at Kapiolani Park:

Sport Notes

There will be polo practise at Moanalua this afternoon. Here is a chance for some of the new ones to get in. Don't forget that there is a man on Maui who never even rode a horse until he came to these Islands five years ago and now is one of the best polo players on the team there.

The 7th Infantry have a very fine looking bunch of fellows. Many of them are expert athletes and they are said to have one crackjack of a football team. While the Sheridan has been in port the boys have made great use of the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium and showerbaths and there have been one or two lively games of handball on the courts.

The time for receiving entries for the handicap men's doubles tennis tournament, to be played for the Castle-Boekus cups, has been extended until Tuesday, May 18, at 5 p. m. The entries thus far received are: A. L. Lowrey and E. S. Gee, A. L. Castle and Capt. Low, A. R. Cunha and C. G. Boekus, R. B. Rietow and J. J. Page, Theo. Richards and A. Richards, H. S. Gray and R.
